Urban & Environmental Studies
Copyright Statement

All rights reserved, subject to the permissions and statutory exceptions set out below. This statement sets out the copyright ownership and permitted use of the original teaching and learning materials developed for the Urban and Environmental Studies course.

1. Ownership and scope: Copyright in original materials authored, owned and remains property of Amir Gohar Ltd, subject to any existing employment rights, signed assignment or other binding agreement. These materials include the course outline, lecture texts, slides, handouts, exercises, assessment briefs and original visual content. Protection applies to original expression and any protectable selection or arrangement, rather than ideas, facts or teaching methods themselves. Hosting, payment, course recognition or accreditation does not, by itself, transfer copyright. Any assignment requires a written instrument signed by or on behalf of Amir Gohar Ltd.

2. Limited permission for delivery: Delivery requires a written agreement with Dr. Amir Gohar identifying the host institution, authorised course run and access period. Subject to that agreement, the host has a non-exclusive, non-transferable licence to reproduce, display and provide the supplied materials solely for that run, in print or through a secure learning platform, to authorised staff and enrolled participants. Participants may retain supplied copies for their own study and professional learning. Institutional access ends after the agreed period, except for restricted copies reasonably required for audit or legal compliance. No permission for future course runs or delivery by replacement tutors is implied.

3. Further use and recordings: Except as permitted by law or separately authorised in writing, the materials, or any substantial part, must not be republished, redistributed, sold, publicly uploaded, adapted, translated, sublicensed or incorporated into another course. Recording, streaming or reusing sessions requires prior written permission from Dr. Amir Gohar and any other necessary rights holders, together with appropriate arrangements for participants' privacy and consent.

4. Attribution and moral rights: The author's name, copyright notices and source acknowledgements must be retained on all authorised copies. By signing this statement, Dr. Amir Gohar asserts his right to be identified as the author of his original course materials under sections 77 and 78 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988. No moral rights are waived by this statement. These include the right to object to derogatory treatment of his work under section 80. The exercise of these rights remains subject to applicable statutory conditions and exceptions.

5. Third party and participant materials: Referenced publications, images, maps, case studies and other third party works remain subject to their owners' rights and licence terms. Citation alone does not authorise reproduction. Participants retain any copyright they own in their contributions and projects; this statement transfers none of those rights.

6. Applicable Law: This statement is subject to UK copyright law, including the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, as amended. It preserves all applicable statutory exceptions, including fair dealing and accessible-format provisions where their conditions are met. This statement does not override an existing binding agreement.
